An 88-page book summarizing the ideas the University of Washington Storefront Studio Project students created for downtown Gig Harbor has been published and is now available.

A free PDF copy can be downloaded from LULU.com and the Downtown Waterfront Alliance will have extra printed copies for $20 per book.

The Downtown Storefront Studio started more than two months ago. The study was coordinated by the Downtown Waterfront Alliance and led by Professor Jim Nicholls. Graduate students in Architecture and Planning met with a balanced panel of citizens and conducted two open house meetings to listen to citizen opinions about the community and their ideas. The study presents creative ideas for development that the community and property owners may want to consider.
